Editor’s Corner

January for me is a time to regroup, not so much regarding New Year’s resolutions that always seem to lose steam, but as a time to revisit the first step: “We admitted we were powerless over alcohol - that our lives had become unmanageable.”

I had no control over my father’s drinking. Nor did I have any control over how my mother reacted. I thought I could change the dynamics by being the “good” kid, the A student, the polite person who never made waves. In reality I was buffeted by waves: the waves of disappointment, anxiety, and insecurity. I was drowning in feelings that I was told I had no right to have in the first place.

I am powerless over many things in my life. The weather, other people’s feelings and actions and words. Sometimes, even my own feelings. I have learned in Al-Anon that it is critical for me to give myself the time and space necessary to acknowledge, feel and release them to my Higher Power. But I do not have to be ruled by them. This is similar to dealing with young children. A three year old will repeat something over and over until the parent stops what they are doing and listens and responds. If that doesn't happen, the cry for attention can easily turn into a temper tantrum. The same is true with emotions. The more I try to ignore, stifle, deny or push down or away “unpleasant” feelings, the more they are likely to morph into something else. Many a time my anger, or fear, or worry would come out sideways spilling into situations where they did not belong. Today I have the tools of the program to help me change the way I deal with my emotions.

Today I try to live in the moment. I try to slow down. By realizing what I need and feel, I am better able to deal with my day. I heard someone at a meeting use the phrase “Pause and Pray.” I pause then I ask for guidance from my Higher Power. Using this simple tool makes my life more manageable.

A grateful member of Al-Anon,

I Stepped Off the “Worry Bus”

Back when my son was in high school, providing me with a multitude of avenues filled with worry, I used to spend a lot of time on what I called the “worry bus.” It was quite large and could hold all of my family and friends.

It had a destination banner in the front that could be changed in a second. We would all pile in and discuss the destination. A first destination might be “Will he die or get thrown in jail?” and we could all discuss it with much distress.

When he would get apprehended for some offense, the destination banner would immediately switch to “Will he make his court date?” to “Will he comply with the judge’s decision?” and eventually to “Will he survive jail?”

The bus was never late, and there was always another if I happened to miss the first one. After some time in Al-Anon, I came to a better understanding of what “detachment with love” meant. At one point, I refused to board the bus. Friends and relatives leaned out the window aghast. “Have you given up on your son?” “What’s wrong with you?” I, however, felt more loving and supportive of my son than I could ever remember. I had a clarity and faith that I could deal with, one revelation at a time.

Without the constant worry, I felt my love was not diluted by strings and expectations. Rather, my love was stronger with detachment. It became visible and a more valuable gift to my son than worry.

MEMBERS’ SHARE

My son and daughter were victims of an impaired driving accident almost five years ago. The impaired driver was their father. Their dad, who suffers from alcoholism, was secretly drinking that July day. My kids spent two hours in a car at night with their severely impaired father and wound up in Westerly Hospital. My son received 11 stitches on his forehead, but gratefully, beyond his injury and bruises, those were the only physical injuries the two kids incurred. My son, who was 10-years-old at the time, had called 911 before the car their dad was driving hit another vehicle. My son was able to tell State Police the make, model, and color of the car and which Rte. 95 exit in Connecticut they were passing. After the crash, my 12-year-old daughter, got out of the vehicle on her own and flagged down help from other drivers. People did help. I like to call them angels. Police arrived on the scene in record time, due in large part, to my son’s 911 call.

I share this with Al-Anon friends because I have learned through service work, I heal. I show a good example to my beautiful, heroic children and life moves forward. I thank you all for being there when I didn’t even have the strength to talk about the accident. I thank you for being there and listening when I finally could talk about it. I thank you for your warm welcome and practice of the program so I might follow in your footsteps. I thank my Higher Power for gently guiding me to Al-Anon before and after that catastrophe. And now I try to pray daily “Only for the Knowledge of His Will for Us and the Power to Carry That Out”(Step Eleven, Paths to Recovery). When I do this, wonderful loving opportunities come my way and I am grateful.

DELEGATE’S CORNER

Happy New Year Everyone.
In December 2013 the Group Representatives (GR) in attendance at the Area Assembly approved a motion to stagger the terms of the Area World Service Committee (AWSC) officers, coordinators, and District Representatives (DR), with approximately 1/3 of the positions changing each year. 2015 – 2017 were transition years during which some of the current AWSC members continued in their positions for 1-3 additional years. The transition period ended with the elections at the Assembly last month. The positions of Delegate, Area Chair, Treasurer, Alateen Coordinator, AA Liaison, and Literature Coordinator were voted on by the GRs in attendance. Also, the District 2 DR was up for election by the District 2 GRs.

Some of us were elected to new positions (Barbara H. (Delegate), Phyllis H. (Area Chair), Ann Marie C. (Literature Coordinator)), Tami K. was re-elected as Treasurer, and Jackie G. will be joining the AWSC as the AA Liaison. Post-Assembly, Ashley B. and Joe G. were temporarily appointed to be Alateen Co-Coordinators (to be confirmed by the GRs at the next Assembly). In addition, Holly R. was elected to the one-year position of Workshop Committee Chair. As the newly elected Area Chair, I look forward to working with the continuing and newly elected officers and coordinators in 2018.

Finally, I want to take this opportunity to thank those who will not be returning to the AWSC in 2018 for their service – David G. (Area Chair), Megan B. (Alateen Coordinator), and Tom H. (2017 Workshop Committee Chair).

Phyllis H., Outgoing Delegate, Incoming Area Chair
